

I think my final major project will be a series of photographs of works I make and install in domestic spaces perhaps the more hidden types of domestic spaces in the place of where I live. I will be using Gaston Bachelard poetics of space a book that looks over the way we experience space to help drive the work. I will be using wallpaper to experiment and test spaces we encounter on daily bases. I chose to experiment with wallpaper, because wallpaper indicated spaces of walls and rooms as well as it ornaments and adds life and colour to the room. I started by cutting strips and pieces of wallpaper and placing it to cover the interior of spaces at home as well as areas that are classified as “non-space” areas that are not given such significance such beneath objects, the interior of drawers and behind objects. My aim is to shed light on spaces we encounter daily but do not give such significance.
